

ASB Hikes Paid ID's to $9.50

By MATHIEU ELLIS
Council Editor

Students wishing parking permits or other advantages offered by an ASB paid ID will be forced to pay $9.50 for full time and $6.50 for part time next semester.

The motion to increase the fees, which was made in finance committee by James Micko, ASB's advisor, encountered heated debate at the ASB meeting and was passed only after the president, Mike Moline, cast his vote.

Richard Cowsill, ASB president elect, argued that

"it's going to be tougher to sell ID cards. Most students don't feel that they are getting their monies worth at $6.50."

Last year ID cards at Valley were $10. The price was brought down to $6.50 in the hope that more students would pay for the card at the cheaper price. It was only active selling on the part of ASB, that sales of the cards went up.

According to Micko, the prices are going up mostly because of inflation. "People are used to inflation. I think that they will pay $9.50 just as they would pay $6.50. Prices have gone up everywhere. Honorariums, which used to be $25, are now $50. To keep this college more than a bare bones institution, we could use a lot of money. Most community colleges in California have fees around $10.

"We support athletics, publications, entertainment and fine arts. I would hate to see tennis, Crown magazine or forensics cut.

"ASB funds should enrich every student's experience by augmenting instructional programs. We recently sponsored a speaker for night classes, these kinds of programs give night students more benefits. With the possibility of a "non-instructional fee" next semester, there is some question as to how this would effect ASB card sales. The "fee" might be designed to include students IDs, thereby making it mandatory. Paid student IDs could also be excluded from the fee, which would make it an extra expense for the students.

"We hope to sell more aggressively. I would expect to see more services throughout the whole college in the future," said Micko.

Cowsill had a suggestion as to what an extra service might be. "I'd like to see a doctor on campus, much in the manner as there is an attorney on campus now."

Cowsill Elected ASB President

By MAX WEEDE
Staff Writer

Richard Cowsill is the new student body president for the 1979-'80 school year. In outlining his plans for the future, Cowsill will be "analyzing existing programs as many need to be changed."

"I feel the president's place is to oversee the entire organization, to give guidance and support to the commissioners," Cowsill explained.

Cowsill won by an overwhelming majority, his 478 votes outnumbered darkhorse candidates Detra Wakefield, 107 votes and John Bono's 144 votes.

Cowsill will be, "Analyzing existing programs, as many need to be changed."

A special run-off election to determine the next vice-president continues today between Ron Ramirez and Brenda Carter. Results are not yet available.

In last week's election, no candidate for vice-president received the necessary 50 percent - plus - one. Carter received 267 votes and Ramirez had 198 in his favor. William Berger was eliminated with only 158 votes.

Greg Palmer was elected commissioner of intramural sports in a close race with only a 12 vote difference against Barbara Butler. "I thought that I had a disadvantage because I am male and my opponent is female. Evidently, it wasn't that important to the voters," Palmer said.

A complaint has been filed against Palmer, though by Julie Harlow, commissioner of elections. According to Harlow, Palmer "violated the election code," but she would not give further details. Other reliable sources, though, reported that Palmer allegedly did not pay a $10 clean-up fee that is required of all candidates who put up campaign posters, which Palmer allegedly Harlow, who herself was running for re-election, beat Felicia Brown for commissioner of elections.

The other candidates all ran unopposed and all won. Sheri Finley was elected Treasurer and Richard Niederberg became the new Chief Justice. The Commissioner of Campus Improvements is Nick Konakas and Commissioner of

GAS SHORTAGE PROBLEMS

Summer School Enrollment May Suffer

Summer school enrollment at Valley College may suffer this year because of the shortage of gasoline, administration officials said this week.

"Enrollment appointments for continuing students are about normal," said John Barnhart, coordinator of admissions and records. "New applications, however, are down about 19 percent at this time. We get a lot of students from USC, UCLA, and Cal State in our summer programs because it is much less expensive to come to Valley, but if these students fear that there will not be gasoline, they might not attend."

Barnhart said many people may not be aware that Valley is having a summer program. He also stressed that it is too early to tell if summer enrollment will be off.

Summer school enrollment, according to Barnhart, is usually about 7,000. "Our enrollment for 1976-'77 ran 7,300 - 7,400."

Barnhart said, "If enrollment falls under what we expected by too much, the Board of Trustees might start thinking twice about offering summer programs in the future. On the other hand, if we have a considerable enrollment, there is no reason we won't be able to continue to have it if funds are available."

Anatol Mazor, dean of instruction, and acting President at Valley during Dr. Thurston's trip to Russia, said he is not worried. "My feeling is that, as we get closer to summer and more and more people hear about it, enrollment will pick up. We are letting people enroll later than we used to," said Mazor, "and consequently people are waiting longer to enroll."

Students Receive Reprieve, Finals Schedule Returned to Eight Days

Students will receive a reprieve in the number of days allotted for final exams this year. Originally six days were set aside; fortunately, the number has been increased to eight.

Originally set to start this semester, the six day finals schedule was moved up to next fall when the State Department of Finance found it too late to change this year's schedule. "Some students may have to take more than two finals in one day," said Dean Anatol Mazor. "The six day final schedule will at least continue through next year."

An interpretation of the Community College Code by the State Department of Finance stated that 175 days of instruction must be provided by the community colleges. Only six days for finals were recognized as days of instruction.

After several community colleges were audited by the Board of Finance last year, the eight day schedule was found out of compliance. Valley and other community colleges stood to lose some state funds if the finals schedule was not amended.

Pat Blakeslee, professor of psychology and president of Faculty Senate, feels the finals schedule will create an unsound atmosphere for finals by forcing many students to take three finals in one day. "I can't see how they can count finals differently than instruction days if other days the instructor sets aside for tests are days of instruction." She feels the six day finals schedule will be inequitable and anxiety inducing. "It is an unwarranted intrusion into the instructional program for non-educational purposes."

Final examination schedule is given on page 8.

"Students should write the chancellor and legislators," said Blakeslee, "and ask for another interpretation of the law or possibly a change in the law."

Attendance Dismal at '6 Days'

Although the speakers have been "excellent," the attendance at talks and films during "Six Days in May" has been dismal.

The energy program will last through tomorrow. "We had very little cooperation from administration and the publicity was not all that good," said Jon Walter, vice-president of the Alliance for Survival.

Exhibits include a solar water heater and a Department of Water and Power energy trailer.

Sunday, which perhaps had the fullest program of all the six days, was ill attended. Approximately 30 people heard Congressman James Corman, Assemblywoman Maxine Waters and Dr. Irving Lyon. Later, that evening, when Professors Lawrence, Jorgenson, Farrell Browslawsky, and John Gofman, M.D., Ph.D., spoke attendance increased.

Corman supported President Carter's decision to deregulate oil prices but felt that there would be some type of relief for the poor, much the same as food stamps and other aids to the lower class.

Lions explained the biological effects of radiation doses. "A woman in her first trimester of pregnancy who receives an X-ray, some 150 percent more than normal environmental radiation, increases the chances of her baby developing cancer of leukemia 15 times."

"In New England, insulation would eliminate the need for all nuclear power plants. In California, electric power companies have an unused reserve of 35 percent more than the used power. Nuclear power supplies 12 percent of the power in this state. That means that if all the nuclear power plants in this state are shut down California would still have 17 percent more power than it needs."

Assemblywoman Maxine Waters (D-48th district) spoke about the current oil shortage, stating that "People are overly patient with the gas crisis. They should be mad and burn their oil cars."

"I believe that there is a conspiracy. California politicians are playing with you," said Waters, calling for the "nationalization of the oil companies, if necessary."

Gofman, who worked on the Manhattan project during World War II, felt that the nuclear power industry is deceiving the citizens of this country. "You wouldn't build a house without a toilet, yet the nuclear industry is building power plants without a way to dispose of the wastes," he said.

Library Hours Corrected

Star wishes to correct an error in last week's paper regarding the library hours during the final exam period.

With the allocation from the Associated Student Body, the library will remain open from 7 a.m.-10 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Fridays, the hours will be 7 a.m.-4 p.m.

On the weekends of June 2 and 9, the library will open from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturdays and noon until 8 p.m. Sundays.

Puppeteer Joins Richard Pryor In Inciting Laughter at Colleges

By MILLIE BARBOZA
Feature Editor

When Norma McClure was 5 years old poverty was no stranger to her, neither were her talents. For most of her younger life though, these talents were visible only through her puppets.

"I made my own puppets from clothing scraps and I wrote every word that came out of their mouths," says McClure, revealing her innate sense of humor.

McClure's talents were recognized and appreciated by her friends and neighbors who shared her ghetto life. Slowly, McClure began to realize she had a job to do and that was to entertain.

"Once I had the faith in myself I knew then and there that nothing was going to stop me."

Comedic routines with her hand-made puppets soon became the springboard for McClure's many diversified talents. A native of California's Northern Bay Area, McClure soon found herself entertaining at universities and colleges. It was at University of California, Berkeley that McClure met and became close friends with Richard Pryor. "He was doing his popular comedy routines and I was with a Bohemian Dance group. We became immediate friends and have been ever since."

The melding of two wild and funny personalities was to result in a popular character for McClure.

"Richie and I would tease each other and I soon took on the character of his mother and he my son. I would get lots of laughs by always telling him what to do and what not to do and followed everything by saying 'Mama knows.'"

Soon McClure took this "Mama Knows" and developed it into a one-woman show. The "Mama Knows" routine has been breaking up audiences at such L.A. spots as the Ambassador Hotel, Ye Little Club, and the Comedy Store.

McClure says her audiences are the best people in the world because they are the people one sees every-day just walking on the street.

"Everyone likes to laugh and I like makin' them laugh," says the graduate of the University of Hard Knocks.

McClure can be seen practically everywhere on campus. She is never without her two large burlap bags that carry her working tools . . . her puppets. She still makes her puppets out of scrap material. Her newest puppets are made out of clothes that McClure has outgrown. One puppet, "Macho Man," is made out of levis and an old fur coat.

McClure puts vanity aside and does her routine of "Mama Knows" in tight fitting, ill-matched clothing, and emphasizes her overweight appearance by joking about it.

"Two-hundred-sixty pounds of baby fat and it makes my man very happy ya' know because I'm his shade in the summer and his heat in the winter!" says McClure with a wide smile that reveals her pearly whites.

"You like these teeth?" she asks. "Well, they're not really my own teeth. I had the real ones removed so I could do my routine of the famous Black comedian, Moms Mabley, on the Gong Show recently."

McClure has been known to remove more than her teeth to entertain her audiences.

"Once when Richard Pryor was appearing at the Circle Star Theater, McClure streaked across the stage during his performance. 'I'm an entertainer,' she said laughingly, "and what my puppets don't do . . . I do."

McClure's solo performances are as varied as the characters. The most popular of her characters come to life in the "Quick Change Artist," "The Blonde Lady who does the Buttock Dance," and a favorite satire of "Where were you when Mammy Goose was shot?"

"Most people have talent but they never have enough faith in themselves to bring it out," says McClure. "I know I can bring it out for them."

"After all, Mama Knows!"

WATCH ME GO—Norma McClure treats the audience at a recent Gong Show appearance to her "Mama Knows" routine.

'Ignoramous' Hayakawa

One way to solve the gas shortage, Sen. S.I. Hayakawa (R-Calif.) has suggested, would be to let the prices rise $2 a gallon or more because "a lot of poor people don't need gas because they are not working."

Star strongly feels Sen. Hayakawa did not need to make such an unnecessary and irresponsible statement about poor people. Being radical is one thing, but Sen. Hayakawa has gone way too far.

Who does he think he is, making such an irrational assumption? Californians voted him in to the United States Congress to represent their needs, didn't they? Then why does he sound more like a barbarian monarch than a democratic senator?

The gas situation has put pressure on as many politicians as it has on hundreds of thousands of consumers. Condemning the poor is not going to help solve the problem in the least. Besides, who could afford to pay $2 a gallon without any financial problem? Perhaps, a president of a corporation or a rich Beverly Hills lawyer could, but what about the middle-class? Does Hayakawa consider them "poor" as well?

Star feels Sen. Hayakawa has violated his freedom of speech, alright. Perhaps he made such a statement because he does not plan to run for re-election when the time comes. If he does run for re-election, Star believes his statement of "a lot of poor people don't need gas because they don't work" has partially wiped out his campaign platform, maybe even fully.

Star also wonders if Sen Hayakawa realizes how unpopular he has become since he made his statement on May 16. This unpopularity being amongst the people that voted him into office a few years ago. Not all of them were rich either.

Busing a Waste of Fuel

The Los Angeles School District's mandatory busing program consumes about 15,000 gallons of gasoline a day. Star believes that in this time of limited gas, the busing program is a waste of precious fuel and should be suspended after school lets out for the summer.

A report recently submitted to the school board for adoption recommended priorities for cutbacks in the district programs in the event that the fuel pinch gets worse.

High priority was given to maintaining the busing-for-integration program. It was listed as one of the last transportation-related programs to be cut if the district's fuel supplies become critically low.

The district's total pupil busing program consumes about 25,000 gallons of fuel a day. This includes the busing of handicapped students, students who live too far from school to walk or might encounter hazards while walking to school, and students participating in the integration program.

Under the priority system, field trips, athletic trips, and performing group trips would be the first to be cut.

Next would be the district's "hazard and distance" busing program; then its work experience-type programs, which involve busing students to businesses; then busing of the handicapped students; then students in the integration program.

The last category to be cut would be the district's health and safety-related activities. This category includes emergency maintenance crews and security guards.

Star feels that if any district programs are to be cut, busing should be suspended until the gas crunch eases up, if it ever does.

At that time, the busing-for-integration program should be thoroughly reviewed, all aspects considered, and a decision made as to whether it is really that necessary and beneficial under the circumstances.

15,000 more gallons a day would probably make Los Angeles motorists pretty happy.

Voting for Your Future

May 29, Election Day, is less than one week away. It is on that day that you will have the opportunity to have a say in who will be making the decisions regarding your future as members of your community and your school.

Three offices of the Board of Trustees will be on the ballot and Star feels it is imperative that the students get out and vote. District wide there are 125,000 students and their votes can make a difference in who will be elected.

Many may be wondering why they should even care. Simply, the Board of Trustees is the governing body of the Los Angeles Community Colleges. If enough students vote, they can make a difference in how the schools will be run.

Policies handed down by the board can result in termination and/or transfer of teachers and administrators, cancellation of courses, and discontinuation of various programs.

For many, the Board of Trustees may be the only measure on the ballot. Don't let it be overlooked.

Get out and vote and show everyone you care about your school and the future of your education.

Enforce Gasoline Laws

Where are your red, green, and yellow flags? Where are your posted hours? Yes, gas station operators, we mean you!

Under law, gas stations are required to have their hours of operation posted and a colored flag out letting motorists know if they are open (green), closed (red), or fuel for emergency vehicles only (yellow).

Many stations are not giving motorists the simple courtesy of letting them know if they are open and at what times, regardless of the law.

Star suggests the following:

First — Station operators should display their hours and put the appropriate flag out.

Second — Motorists who find a station that does not obey this law should report it to the authorities.

Third — The police should enforce the law more strictly by keeping a better watch on stations to see that the law is being complied with.

Getting gas nowadays is hard enough. If all concerned make a little more effort, it will be a lot easier for all of us to stand in line.

Bone Up at the Library

ASB has afforded the students of Valley College the opportunity to utilize the library for longer hours during the upcoming finals period.

At an expense in excess of $1,200, the library will remain open for two additional hours during the week and will maintain hours of 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. - 9 p.m.

Star feels that students should make maximum use of the additional library hours in preparing for their finals.

It would be a shame for the library to remain open with no one utilizing the additional services.

In addition to this, if the experiment in longer hours fails this time, the ASB may never put the money out again for extended hours during finals.

Curb Overstepping His Powers

By EIRAM POLLARD
Editor-in-Chief

Talk about powerplay politics and sacrificing common sense for the betterment of one's career, and you're talking about California's Lieutenant Governor, Mike Curb.

The Constitution of the state gives the lieutenant governor the power to sign bills into law when the governor is out of the state. However, this is one power which can be abused.

Mike Curb has abused this policy to the fullest extent.

He has passed bills into law and threatened to pass others with flagrant disregard for Gov. Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown's positions on the issues.

His most recent abuse of this rule came when the governor was in Washington, talking to President Jimmy Carter about California's energy problems.

With fervent disregard for the quality of California's environment,

Curb hastily tried to pass a bill allowing for higher lead content in gasoline.

Curb suggested that by increasing the amount of lead in gas, the shortages would be eased by three percent.

He explained that since the emission standards are higher everywhere else in the country, we can take the same gasoline as the rest of the country.

I ask, did Curb put any thought into the fact that a large percentage of cars can only use unleaded gas? In case you're uninformed, Mike, cars that use unleaded cannot use gas with a higher octane rating than 89 and if they put gas in with a higher lead content, they will burn out their catalytic converter.

Curb is only trying to put through these measures which will put him in the political spotlight and better his chances for the governorship of the state, should he decide to run in 1982.

In fact, he may take the office in 1980, if his predecessor, Brown, goes on to the Presidency.

Curb's measures are full of convoluted logic, which can only hurt the people who pay his salary.

He is abusing the power of the governorship. The lieutenant governor is afforded the powers of acting governor; but, these powers should be used in a reserved manner and not to upstage the governor, better one's political party or future.

Mike Curb has abused the privileges of the office, and they should be rescinded. His previous actions should be reviewed and subject to repeal.

Curb was put in by the people of California because of the candidates running for the position. He was the least undesirable. He has abused his privileges, his actions should be reviewed, and he should be reprimanded.

LETTER TO THE STAR

Summer School Transportation Blues

I want to go to summer school, but the gas shortage is absolutely killing me! We can really feel it at Valley College when our students are choosing not to attend summer school, since attendance is required almost daily and the excess of travel conflicts with our gasoline tanks' supplies.

A good alternative is the R.T.D. bus system, but even they are making summer school impossible because of their inaccessible bus stops in the evening hours. I want to take the bus to work, from work to Valley and then home — but there is no way I can travel from any of Valley's corners to my home in Sylmar after school lets out at 9:00 or 10:00 p.m. without getting home just around midnight! All I need is a lift to either Victory or Sepulveda Boulevards and I would have no problem!

I even contacted Commuter Computer, but there is no transportation available in the evening hours!

What are we students to do? How can we further our education, while conserving fuel and money, when our transportation authorities are making traveling without automobiles absolutely impossible!!

I, therefore, propose the following:

1) The Star would cooperate by publishing telephone numbers to call for information and application, along with any announcements from the Placement Office transportation committee deemed necessary by the committee.

2) Every interested student, those who are willing to drive, those who need to take a bus and those who are willing to form a carpool could call the Placement Office and submit the following information:

a) Name, address and telephone number.

b) Origination point, whether from work (or other) or at Valley itself, and destination point, being home, bus stop or other, and

c) Whether they are willing to drive, carpool or need a ride;

3) The Placement Office, along with assistance from participating students, would review all applications and devise a plan of action to provide all students with essential transportation; and

4) The Placement Office transportation committee would then arrange rides for applicants, so as to insure all students' needs being met, and contact each one advising them accordingly.

Please advise the Placement Office and the Star's Editor-in-Chief if you are interested in such a proposal! We need their support and the more contacts they receive, all the better for our plan! I need not emphasize the importance of completing required courses before the upcoming fall semester for many students — it could mean entering a higher institution of learning all that much sooner!!

Scholarships Presented At Tea

Most of the guests were drinking orange juice at the Scholarship Tea on Monday.

The Tea, titled a "Scholarship Celebration", was just that, a get-together of students and faculty to recognize scholastic achievement and present scholarships to students, most of whom had received the money long before.

During the introduction, William Lewis, dean of student services at Valley, said, "The recognition of excellence is one of the most important functions at Valley."

The awards were presented after those who attended got food from the buffet. Most of the presentors were faculty members or department heads from the field of study each recipient was pursuing at Valley.

The awards were kept brief because of the large number of students to be recognized, and most areas of study at Valley were represented. Allied Health and Business education gave the most scholarships, with a total of 22.

Entertainment was provided midway through the program. Lalo Teri Elliot and Margaret Curtin performing a violin-piano concerto titled "Symphonie Espagnole," "Solo Dance" by Suzanne Rankel, and "Sun Dance" by Katherine Fertig and Raquel Navarro.

Some of the notable events during the program were, the failure of William Payden, head of the Journalism Department, to make an appearance for the Journalism presentation, and the presentation of the Associated Student Body Scholarships. ASB apparently gave scholarships to themselves (members of student council).

The Patrons Association of Valley College provided the food and table arrangements for the event.

Counselors Offer Special Help

By RIA VAN DAALEN WETTERS
City Editor

NOTE: This is the last in a six-part series of counselor spotlights. Its purpose is to acquaint Valley students with the various counselors available to them in a variety of areas.

Joanne Parker and Marty Vego are Special Programs Counselors providing services and helping the physically impaired.

"Physically impaired", according to Vego, means a person who has a physical disability that limits him in some way. This could range from diabetes, or heart disease, to being confined to a wheelchair. Parker added that the disability could be either temporary, such as a broken leg or recovering from surgery, or permanent, with sight or hearing impaired.

Some of the services provided, according to needs, include elevator keys, reader services, mobility assistance, note taking, testing, and special parking areas, along with counseling.

Parker, who has been working in the Special Programs office for outside world of current employment, and is within their physical capabilities."

Parker said that about 2,400 applicants at Valley marked their application as having some sort of disability, and estimated that almost 600 physically disabled students are served by the Special Programs office.

She indicated that apparently

some people feel they are disabled enough to mark it on their application, but are too embarrassed or self-conscious to come in and take advantage of the services available to them in the Special Programs office.

Vego pointed out that a disabled person is still a person first. "You don't see a person in a wheelchair, you see a personality," he said.

Parker summed it up for both of them. "All of us in this office — we really enjoy our jobs."

The Special Programs office is located in Admin. 126.

Annabelle Nye is the Financial Aids counselor. In addition, she does personal, academic, and career counseling.

The need for financial assistance is not determined at Valley. When a student fills out an application it is sent to CSS, California Scholarship Service, in Berkeley. An analysis is done which is based on nationally established criteria to determine whether the student is eligible. The service then lets the student and the Financial Aids Office know if the student has qualified.

Many different programs are available. Aid can be received in the form of a grant, a work-study program, or a loan.

The amount a student receives is based on his parents' income, if he is living at home, or dependent. If a student is on his own, or independent, the amount is based on his income.

Since there is no tuition, the aid that students get is for room and board, transportation, personal expenses, and school expenses.

"These budgets are very modest," said Nye. However, if it weren't for Financial Aids, a lot of people would have to work full-time instead of going to school, she added. Approximately 1,500 students are receiving financial aid at Valley.

Students receiving financial aid must maintain certain standards. "Since we are using federal money, we have to follow federal regulations," said Nye. Students must maintain a 2.0 grade point average and carry the required number of units for the educational objectives they have set for themselves.

When students encounter problems in these areas, Nye counsels them to try and make sure they conform to the regulations.

The Financial Aids Office is located in CC 4, across the hall from the Learning Center.

Hamer Given Another Award from 'Seniors'

Dozens of plaques and awards line the walls of the small office contained within an office. The woman who occupies the office is small in size but not in stature.

Last week at the Older Americans Recognition Day Program, she was again the recipient of an award of merit. Lois Hamer was selected by the Los Angeles County's Department of Senior Citizen Affairs as the Outstanding Older American for 1979 in recognition of her "dedicated volunteer service to improve the quality of life for older Americans."

In response to her most recent award, Hamer exclaimed, "Older does not bother me. I am an older American, after all, I'm 63."

When the small 63-year-old woman is not busily working in her office as project manager for the Senior Adult Program at Valley, she finds time to volunteer for over a half-dozen different community service organizations, grow all her own vegetables, see friends, read books, and write.

Some of her commitments include Fellowship of Reconciliation, president of the Educational Committee on Aging, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, L.A. County Committee on Affairs of Aging, and Chairperson of the Educational Committee for L.A. City Community Development Department Council on Aging; just to name a few.

The list goes on but Hamer insists, "If you toot your own horn it becomes raucous in peoples ears."

'Picnic' Premieres Tonight

By PARKER SEEMAN
Assoc. Fine Arts Editor

Lazy, warm summer days conjure up images of persons gathering together at a picnic to gossip, eat, drink, flirt, and play games.

VC's Theater Arts Department is jumping the gun so to speak by inviting Valley students and their friends to their production of "Picnic," a Pulitzer Prize winning drama by William Inge, on successive weekends of May 24, 25, 26, and May 31, June 1 and June 2 in the Little Theater at 8:30 p.m.

General admission is $2 with students admitted for half price with paid I.D. Reservations may be made by phoning 781-1200, ext. 318 or 319.

"The play is about love and lust in the early 50's," said student stage manager Daryl Baskin. "The setting is the backyards of not-too-rich Flo Owens (Marloe Clarke) and her two daughters Madge and Millie (Stacey Shaffer and Melanie Bishop) on one side and Helen Potts, a neighbor (Lisa Gluckman), on the other side."

In the early, hot Labor Day morning while preparations are being made for the picnic, a handsome, former college football hero, but a drifter, appears on the scene. His presence is immediately felt like pre-lit fireworks upon these rural people.

This ne'er-do-well Hal (Bob Stachowiak) had been doing odd jobs for Mrs. Potts when he sees rich Alan Seymour (Jeff Klarin), an old college chum. They ham it up for old times sake as all look on aghast.

Hal is then invited to take Millie, the intelligent, artistic tomboy, to the picnic later in the day. She takes a liking to him.

However, when Hal sees Madge, the prettiest but not the brightest girl in town, he falls for her. In return, Hal awakens more ardor within Madge than she had ever dreamed of, so she throws over Alan, the rich kid she had previously pledged to the dismay of her mother Flo.

"Everyone then goes off to the picnic — except Hal and Madge," said Baskins.

"Picnic" is directed by Patrick Riley, associate professor of theater arts.

"WHAT TO TELL MOM?"—Hal (Bob Stachowiak) and Madge (Stacey Shaffer) have fallen in love. Now they have to tell Flo that Madge is not going to see Alan anymore.

WOODY ALLEN MOVIE REVIEW

'Manhattan;' Encore of an Encore

By LANNY CONTE
Sports Editor

When Woody Allen made "Annie Hall," the Academy Awards' best picture of two years ago, critics asked what he could do for an encore? Well, is there such a thing as an encore for an encore?

"Manhattan," Allen's newest motion picture, is a very arty movie. Released by United Artists and set to the tunes of George Gershwin music,

"Manhattan" is a nostalgic love affair between Allen and the city itself. "Manhattan" is life and love itself to Allen.

Filmed entirely in black and white, which only accentuates the majestic beauty of the city of lights, "Manhattan" is the sum total of all Allen's wealth of experience and natural comedic talents rolled into one. He truly learns from his successes as well as his failures, and like a fine wine, gets better with age.

In "Manhattan" Allen plays a 42-year-old comedy series writer who is also working on a novel. So is his ex-wife and mother of his son, who is writing an expose on her life with Allen before she left him for another woman. Allen's girlfriend is a 17-year-old aspiring actress, yet to graduate from high school. He then becomes romantically involved with his best friend's mistress, which needless to say makes for an awkward situation when the two couples get together.

The cast of Diane Keaton, Michael Murphy, Muriel Hemingway, and Meryl Streep are all very good, but it is Allen himself who steals the show. This time refreshingly playing a fellow who is very cool and confident in his romantic endeavors, Allen nonetheless still amuses his audiences with his nervously humorous dialogue and blatant outlook on life.

Besides starring in and directing "Manhattan," Allen also co-wrote it, which means he quite possibly could be the first person nominated for an Academy Award for those three categories in the same motion picture two times; and who knows, he may be even the first to win them.

Puppet Class Gives Life to All Creations

By CHRISSY JESSEE
Fine Arts Editor

Creating puppets at Valley College could lead to a grand performance with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra at the Music Center.

Theater Arts 60, usually called Puppet Production, is a unique class that will be offered in the fall for all creative, unusual, beginning, or advanced puppeteers.

The class is under the instruction of teacher-puppeteer-entertainer Betsy Brown, who, with puppeteer Bill Sousa, have established their own bi-lingual puppet production company called "Teatro de los Puppets."

"Every year our puppet class at Valley creates a new production to perform with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra at the Music Center," Brown said. "We have been doing this for the past four years."

Brown said her bi-lingual production company will be performing Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with the L.A. Philharmonic at the Music Center on May 29, 30, 31, and June 1, for 10,000 elementary school children.

"Our production of 'Carnival of the Animals' was fully created in the puppet class at Valley, and is co-sponsored by Community Services," said Brown.

Brown also said that her Puppet Production class, which will be listed in the scheduled under Theater Arts 60, will be meeting in the fall on Thursdays from 3 to 6 p.m. The class is worth three units.

"Designing puppets and learning how to become a puppeteer is quite an experience. However, nothing can top seeing a child fully excited after a performance you helped to create."

CAPTAIN JIM'S CROW'S NEST

No. 1 Ranked Baseballers Seek State Title

This week, Valley College's number-one-ranked baseball team tries to prove its ranking in the state playoff tournament, taking place May 23-26.

After playing Los Madanos College last night with the results unofficial at press time, the Monarchs, if they win, face another opponent tonight at 7 p.m. at Blair Field in Long Beach. If they should lose, they play at Cerritos at 3 p.m. For further information, call either the Valley Star, ext. 276, or the Men's Gym, ext. 212.

The Monarchs will play from four to seven games in the double-elimination tournament, depending again on if they win the first game, in which case they would be placed in the winner's bracket, or if they lose and are sent to the loser's bracket.

It could become a bit demanding for the players to play seven games in five days, but head coach Dave Snow plans to play the regulars all the way. "We're playing for all the marbles. You have to go with your best," he said.

Snow plans to throw Mike Digiacomo, his 12-1 left hander, in the first game, while saving Scott Olshane, the right hander with an 11-0 record, for the second game. There's a good chance the Monarchs will face Cerritos, a team with mostly right-handed hitters, in the second game, and Snow wants to use Olshane against them.

The Monarchs warmed up for the playoffs over the weekend with a doubleheader against the Metropolitan Conference All Stars. Valley won the opener, 12-5, led at the plate by John Stevenson and Russ Stephens. The nightcap ended a 3-3 tie after seven innings.

This is the first time ever that the Monarchs have competed in the state playoffs, and the sports department at the Valley Star says caps off to Dave Snow, the man who turned the baseball program around at Valley College. Last year, Snow's first season as the Monarchs' mentor, he took a team that finished with a 10-27 record the previous year, and piloted them to a 27-10 mark, losing to Long Beach City College in the Metropolitan Conference playoffs.

This year, Snow didn't take any chances. The Monarch nine won both rounds of the season, thus avoiding a playoff series. Snow's squad lost only one league game all year, that to Long Beach in the season opener. Since that, Valley has won 20 straight league contests enroute to a 32-3 overall record so far. The sluggers only other losses came in a mid-season tournament.

Don't get the idea, however, that the Monarchs choke in tournaments and will fizzle in the state tourney. At the start of the season, they won both the Casey Stengel Tournament and the Santa Barbara/Ventura Tournament on their way to establishing themselves as the state's premier team.

The Snowman, as he is known, would not go out on a limb and make a prediction for the playoffs, saying that the team would take the games one at a time, but he appears confident, and he's got the talent and the intelligence to go all the way.

Yes, the future looks bright for baseball at Valley. As Snow points out, it all starts with recruiting, and the Monarchs recent success is now drawing the quality high school players from all over the San Fernando Valley, and it appears that this year's Monarchs could be the first in a long line to go to the state finals.

Athlete of Week

John Stevenson went four-for-five and had three runs scored to lead Valley College's number one ranked baseball team in the state past the Metropolitan Conference All-Stars 12-5 Saturday in preparation for the State Championships which began Wednesday, and is thus the Valley College Athlete of the Week for May 15-21.

Stevenson, the All-Metro shortstop, broke the Valley College record of runs-batted-in in a season with Player of the Year first baseman Dave Yobbs with fifty, nine more than the Dodgers' Roberto Castillo had. Stevenson is one of team's best all-around players.

LITTON (lit'·ə·n)

To Students it means

1. part-time; 2. summer help; 3. flexible hours; 4. more.

LITTON - ENCODER DIVISION is giving you the last quiz for the semester. Just match the employment options to your schedule. Then call or write Helen Duggan to advise her of your Grade A choice in summer employment.

LITTON has openings for Electronic Test Technicians and Inspectors. Hours are quite open and flexible, with both day and night shifts available. Part-time can mean anywhere from 20 hours up to a full 40 hour work week, flexible to your schedule. And then there's the option of staying on and turning this into more than just summer employment.

As a career launching ground, LITTON is an important name to remember. Listed by FORTUNE as one of the 75 largest corporations, and acknowledged as a world leader in our field, we've been advancing the state-of-the-art in Shaft Encoder design since 1962.

The Test Technicians we seek to join us for testing and troubleshooting electronic equipment will be knowledgeable in schematics, logic blueprints and electronic theory. They'll be able to set up and use digital voltmeters, oscilloscopes and recording meters. Inspectors will use microscopes and be familiar with blueprints and production methods, wiring practices, assembly techniques and inspecting procedures.

If you're inexperienced, but have background courses and good aptitude, we'll take you on as a trainee. If you are experienced, see definition 4.

Then see Helen Duggan. Call (213) 341-6161.

WOMEN. YOU'RE EQUAL IN THE AIR FORCE.

Women start out on the same footing as men in Air Force ROTC. Women wear the same insignia and hold the same cadet positions in AFROTC, just as they do later on as Air Force officers.

And the same AFROTC scholarship can be yours as a woman. If you qualify, you can have your tuition, book costs and lab fees paid by the Air Force, and receive $100 a month for other expenses. It helps free you to concentrate on your education. And that's important.

As an Air Force officer, you'll be expected to use your training and education, and be a leader managing people and complex systems. You'll be handed executive responsibility, starting with your first job. It's a great way to be equal, and a great way to serve your country. Check into the AFROTC program at your campus. Be sure to ask about AFROTC scholarships — you may be helping yourself earn an exciting new lifestyle.

Sophomore students must apply now for Fall 1979 entry. Students enrolled at four-year institutions may complete AFROTC training by enrolling in the UCLA Extension and attending class one day a week. Contact Larry Pace at (213) 825-1742. AFROTC programs are also available at USC (714-2670) and Loyola (642-2771).

Golden West Foils Softballers Again

By LANNY CONTE
Sports Editor

Connie George's two run double in the bottom of the sixth inning gave Golden West College a 2-0 victory over LAVC's Monarchs in the California State Softball Championship Game last Saturday afternoon.

It was the fourth time in seven games this year Golden West's Rustlers came out on top of Valley, with all four games being the four most important meetings between the two. The Rustlers defeated the Monarchs in the Golden West Tournament, earned a spot in the State Championships against Valley, won the Southern California Championships, and now made Valley settle for the number two spot in the most important game of the year between the two teams.

Golden West had won the National Championships the last four years but bypassed the National Tournament this year to compete in the more competitive California Championships. Valley had also finished second in the state last year and will return a fine crop of sophomores and a promising band of freshmen to try again next year.

The Monarchs, the second place team from Southern California behind Golden West, defeated Northern California Champs West Valley 2-0 last Friday to earn a spot in the State Championship Game. Valley righthander Pam Titchener was the game's stand-out player as she pitched a stupendous two-hitter while collecting two hits and a run-batted-in at the plate and scoring the game's insurance run.

All the game's scoring came in the top of the third inning. With two outs and nobody on Valley shortstop Katie Cross got aboard on an error by the West Valley shortstop and then stole second base. Titchener singled home Cross while taking second on the late throw to the plate and then scored on a single by slugging first baseman Shelley Bly.

Titchener was nearly flawless, at one point retiring ten batters in a row while also retiring West Valley's last seven batters, with no runner getting past second base. Cross herself was a key factor in the Monarchs' defensive gem (no errors), getting six assists, four in a row, and a put out, as was centerfielder Sandra Zerner.

Meanwhile, Southern California Player of the Year Cindee Sincerest also pitched a two-hitter for Golden West's Rustlers in a 2-0 victory over Northern runner-up San Joaquin Delta. Sincerest and Delta's Cheryl Meizner both had one-hitters through four innings but then Golden West scored two unearned runs on a triple by catcher Dora Young down the rightfield line. San Joaquin Delta went on to defeat West Valley 4-3 in the consolation game.

The stage was set for the seventh and final game of the year between rivals L.A. Valley and Golden West. The Monarchs had been finishing second (though admittedly just barely) all year long to Golden West, but this, the State Championship, was the one that counted.

But Titchener wasn't near her form of a night earlier while Sincerest was. Both teams went hitless in the first two innings, with Zerner leading off the third inning with a single. But after being sacrificed to second by Cross Zerner was stranded there.

In the bottom of the third inning the Rustlers got their first runner aboard on a walk and was advanced all the way to third before Titchener forced a ground-out to Lori Lyneis at third.

In the fourth inning of the scoreless dual Bly singled and was sacrificed to second before being stranded. Meanwhile Titchener held on to her no-hitter by retiring the Rustlers in order in the fourth and fifth innings.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, just when it looked as if there might be another fourteen inning marathon like the last time the two great teams met, the roof came down on the Monarchs. Kim Lybell led-off the inning with a walk and then went to second on a wild pitch by Titchener. Although she had yet to give up a hit Valley decided to replace Titchener with Bly, who had beaten the Rustlers twice before this year.

But Bly's very first pitch was also wild, with Lybell taking third with nobody out. Karen Owens then laid down a bunt in what looked like a squeeze play but Lybell held her place on third. Dumbfoundedly the Monarchs held on to the ball as Owens trotted safely to second. The next batter popped out to short, bringing up Connie George. A week earlier George defeated the Monarchs with a triple. This time she hit a towering fly to deep center with the Valley outfield playing up for a two-run double and the ballgame: LAVC going quietly in the seventh.

The Monarchs had proven to Golden West all year long they had the potential to be the best; they were certainly the Rustlers' most feared opponent, but in the end it was Sincerest & Co. who came through in the clutch, proving that they are indeed number one.

LANNY'S LOCKER

Well, I just couldn't leave well enough alone, could I?

No sooner did my response column to my male chauvenism column hit the newstands did I receive a challenge to a one-on-one game of basketball by Valley College Women's Athletic Director Diedra Stark.

For those of you who don't know Ms. Stark, she is a tall, muscular, amazon type who eats nails for breakfast, while I am short, fat, and dumpy. Not really (the part about Ms. Stark).

In any rate she clobbered me. There's no other way of putting it. The final score was 20-6 in her favor but the game wasn't as close as the score might indicate.

Believe it or not this coy young lady hustled me. She even hornswoggled me into giving her an eight point lead before I found out from her husband she led the Pacific Coast Conference in scoring while playing for Long Beach State. While I spent the weekend stocking up on pizzas and hot fudge sundaes she was probably practicing basketball while walking in her sleep.

Ms. Stark stunned me by scoring three straight hoops all within the first minute (after I like a gentleman gave her first ins). The closest I ever got in the game was 6-12 before she got her last wind and blew me away.

An excellent shot from outside, Ms. Stark still did most of her damage from close in (I was afraid to hand check her). Of course I was shooting very poorly that day and if I played her again I wouldn't do nearly as bad, but after one humiliation who needs another?

In any rate, congratulations on a fine performance Ms. Stark, you now get my vote for both male and female Athlete of the Year. And, oh yes, what would you say to a rousing game of hop scotch?

Speaking of Athlete of the Year, this is the last week to get your votes in for both your favorite male and female Valley College Athletes. Just give your votes, sport they participated in, your name and i.d. number, and send them to me here at the Valley Star or drop them off in room BJ 114. The winners will be announced next week in this column. Remember, every vote counts and athletes are eligible to vote.

FIRES ACROSS—Lori Lyneis of Valley College softball team shows good form in retiring runner at first during California State Championships last Saturday. Lyneis and teammates finished second in the state for second consecutive year.

Cross Country

Intramural sports is holding a cross country run on Thursday, May 31, in Monarch Stadium at 11 a.m. The distance will be 5,000 meters for men, while women (being inferior?) will run 3,000 meters. Everyone is invited.

PLAYER OF THE YEAR—Katie Cross shows superlative fielding concentration that helped her to Metro Player of the Year Award and helped team to #2 status in the state.

Elsa Wild Animal Appeal Helps Preservation by Donations

By RIA VAN DAALEN WETTERS
City Editor

Wild animals have a friend in the Elsa Wild Animal Appeal, a non-profit wildlife conservation and educational organization.

Financial Aids counselor Annabelle Nye, a volunteer for Elsa, got involved when she saw one of their yellow booths at a shopping mall.

"I always loved animals. I was one of those who thought, 'I wish there was something I could do to help them.' Most people who work full-time can't do much. By being a volunteer I feel I'm helping a cause I really believe in," she said.

"A wild animal will never be tame. People don't realize this."

The organization was founded by Joy Adamson, author of the book Born Free.

Elsa's main aim is to educate the younger generation about ecology, conservation, and the value of living creatures. A teaching kit is sent out to hundreds of Elsa Clubs across the nation made up of teachers and grade school children.

The headquarters of the American branch of the Elsa Wild Animal Appeal, located in North Hollywood, has been in existence since 1969. Elsa has other branches in England, Japan, Canada, and Kenya, where the organization originated.

Elsa volunteers go to shopping malls and set up booths where T-shirts, jewelry, pictures, paintings, and other items are sold. All proceeds go to producing the teaching kits and making donations to other wildlife causes like the Greenpeace (save the whales) Foundation.

"People don't realize that zoos will not take these wild animals. They have enough of their own."

One glass case in the bookstore on campus sells these Elsa items also, along with stationary, bumper stickers, and buttons. All proceeds go directly to wildlife work.

Volunteers at the shopping mall booths also explain that people should never buy wild animals as pets.

"A wild animal will never be tame," said Nye. "People don't realize this. They buy a wild animal just to be different or for their ego. When the animal grows they find out that it is too big, too strong, too wild, and too expensive for them."

The fate of these animals is sometimes tragic. Some are put in cages so small that the spine becomes misshapen and the legs atrophied.

"People don't realize that zoos will not take these wild animals. They have enough of their own," said Nye.

Wildlife Waystation, which Elsa has recently become affiliated with, is a kind of "half-way house" for wild animals that have been confiscated, mistreated, or given up.

Over 300 animals are now being sheltered by the Waystation in Little Tujunga Canyon.

One effort currently being made to raise money for Elsa is a raffle for a 14-day African safari. Tickets are $1 and can be obtained by contacting Nye or the Elsa headquarters in North Hollywood at 5000 Lankershim Blvd., telephone number is 769-8388.

Crown Magazine Arrives Today

By PATTY MAZZONE
Staff Writer

Millie Barboza, Crown Editor-in-Chief, hopes the new Crown "will set a new trend for Community College magazines."

She described the new edition as contemporary, "with a wide array of articles with lots of thought behind them."

"Crown is now more of a feature magazine than a yearbook," said Eddie Irwin, professor of journalism and Crown advisor.

The 48-page Valley College publication, which is scheduled to be distributed today, will be given free to students with a paid ID, otherwise it costs $3.

Crown is now produced twice a year instead of once, beginning last semester. The major difference is the size of the publication. It went from a 10-inch-by-14-inch to a 9-inch by

Lugavere Named New Star Editor

Two-way communication between students and their paper is the main goal of Janice Lugavere, Valley College journalism major, who has been named Editor-in-Chief of the Valley Star for the Fall '79 semester.

Feedback, she says, is the key to success: "We're the only real vehicle for general student opinion and information on campus, and we have to know what students want to see and hear.

"In addition," she adds, "Star must accurately report the news of and for the students, faculty, administration, and the district."

Despite the paper's number one status among community colleges across the country, Lugavere finds more effort is needed to bring the paper into line with its most basic function: communication.

"Sure we're number one," she says, "but Star doesn't fulfill its purpose unless it gets read. That's where we must try harder. Winning awards is fine, but it's secondary to communicating."

"When we're being read and doing our job well," she stresses, "the awards will follow."

Though she graduated from Valley with an A.A. five years ago, Lugavere returned here "to pick up where I left off."

She left off in Journalism I on her first time around. "So five years later," she says, "I decided it was time to come back and really learn it all."

"I didn't set myself any sort of goals upon my return," explains the new editor. "I was just probing something new after several false starts. But I'm glad I came back to journalism; I joined the staff, and somehow things just kept on rolling."

With husband Joel, a veteran photographer for the Los Angeles Times, the Lugaveres are now both deeply involved in journalistic pursuits. He is also a Valley graduate and a past chief photographer for Star as well as for the campus, a position no longer in existence.

Lugavere is now making her own way in the field and has set up ideals not only for the paper but herself as well.

"While I'm concerned with improving Star as a voice of the students, I'm also working to improve myself as a journalist," she says. "This job is a means for me to be expressive and productive at the same time."
